DID you ever look up the meaning of the words "Price" and "Cost"? We venture you'd be interested, even surprised.

"Price" originally meant not money, but cash—but Reward, Praise, Worth. In the days of Caesar they called it "Pretium."

"Cost" comes from the old Icelandic word "Koster," signifying to Choose, to Test, to Prove.

So "Price" is really the Worth of the thing sold. "Cost" means how well the thing bought proves up in actual use.

So we're not so far off the track today, for when you buy paint, the Price of it should be the measure of its usefulness, in appearance and wear. Its Cost to you will be how well it stands the test you put it to. If it does well, it's cheap; if not, you paid too much.

Measured by this, poor paint costs far, far more than good paint; never worth the price asked and never stands the test of wear.

There's one house paint made that's worth the price and stands the test, and that's HORSE SHOE BRAND HOUSE PAINT,—best lead, zinc, aged linseed oil, japan, coloring matter and nothing else; honest materials, honestly prepared, sold on honor.

Seven gallons of HORSE SHOE PAINT covers as much surface as ten gallons of ordinary paint and covers it longer.

Then, too, there's a full line of good HORSE SHOE BRAND Paint Specialties—HORSE SHOE BRAND Paint for the Barn, for the Roof, for the Porch, for the Floor, for Inside Walls, Screens, for Buggies, Wagons—in fact, for everything.

When you're ready to buy paint or paint specialties, and want the Price and the Cost both right as well as the Paint, just remember that there is one store where you'll find what you're looking for.

Dressing for the Party

"Oh, say, mother, I don't want 'em mangled," protested the boy who was going to a party. "Shiny nails are awful icky. Why, I don't want to have my nails polished, and he said to me just yesterday that he'd never heard of anybody having to take a bath every day except me. I've asked every boy in this block and there ain't a single fellow who has to take a bath more'n once a week. Now I've got to take an extra one this afternoon on account of Maybelle's party. Great! I don't want to go to her old baby doll party."

"Say, mother, have I got to go? Well, I think it's mean having parties on Saturday. I wish I was lame, so I couldn't when I had them. No, you wouldn't want me to her party. I don't see why the girls are always having parties."

"You say you're going to give me one to return all this hospitality? Oh, say, mother, please don't. I don't see what I've done that you're going to give me a party. If you only won't do it I'll be more careful about my English and I'll clean my nails and scrub my teeth every morning with tooth powder. I will, however, have a party he'd give me terrible."

"There's no use training me up for society, 'cause I'm going to be a gold miner. Bill knows about a mine out in Nome or Nevada that's awfully rich. There's old nuggets as big as footballs and he and me—I mean I and him—are going out there as soon as we're 16. There was one fellow who went out when he was only 15 going on 16, and now he's a millionaire."

"Well, anyway, if I do have to go to college first before I'm a miner, I'll be a athlete. No society for me, mother. I won't see why I can't get out parties and dancing society."

"That brown stuff on my hands? Oh, that's the mahogany stain Bill and me are going to put on my model aeroplane. I was just trying it. It's a swell color." Of course, it won't come off easy or it wouldn't be any good. Bill was coming over this afternoon to work on the aeroplane. He'll be with you when he finds out that you made me go to a party. Bill hasn't got any mother. She died when he was a kid a few days old. Of course, it was an awful sad loss to him, but he's real brave about it. He says his father wouldn't know if he didn't take a bath for a month. His father believes in letting Bill grow up independent and develop his own character, that's what he says. Oh, yes, Bill takes a bath real often. I didn't say he didn't."

"Oh, say, mother, do I have to wear them silk stockings and pumps? I hate them. I don't want to wear them when I start to the party. I don't care if Aunt Julia did give 'em to me. I'd rather she'd given me some leggings or a pair of ice skates. I hate them. I don't want to wear them Saturday. Say, mother, it's awful mean the way my Saturdays go. Bill and me—I mean I and Bill—ain't that right? Well, then, we was going to finish the aeroplane and make another model all by ourselves, and now if I've got to go to Aunt Julia's I don't know when I'll have time for anything."

"No, I haven't written to grandpa yet. Of course not. With all them parties and calls on Aunt Julia I don't have a minute to write letters. I guess if grandpa knew how my time was spent he wouldn't expect me to write to thank him for that jackknife. Bill says it's a pretty good knife and he's going to get a man he knows to sharpen it for me. The man used to be his father's hired man when the kept a horse, before Bill was born, and he's such an old friend of the family that he'll do it for nothing. So even if you don't think Bill is a good companion for me, you can see what a valuable friend he is."

"Oh, say, mother, I hate that sissy deal! Can't I wear my old dark blue ones? No, I ain't chewing gum. I just happened to have a little in my mouth, but I wasn't chewing it. I never chew it since you told me not to the last time. But I've got a little on hand that I thought I ought to use up, so I just put it in my mouth once in a while."

"Lemme comb my hair myself, mother. I can part it. Say, did you hear that? That's Bill's whistle. Lemme go to the window and holler down that it's all off with the aeroplane work today, for I've got to go to a party."

"Say, mother, what do you think? Bill's all dolled up in a lot of new clothes and he's going to Maybelle's party himself. Wouldn't that freeze you?"—Chicago Daily News.

HEADED OFF BY DIPLOMACY

Kitchener's Smooth Way of Keeping Egyptians From Mixing in Turkish-Italian War.

Egypt is actually a Turkish province, although the British control is so complete and tenacious that the sovereignty of the Sultan is in the shadowy kind. None the less Turkey has the nominal right to order the Egyptian army to cross the frontier into Tripoli and to help in the discomfiture of the Italian invaders. But although Turkey has wisely refrained from issuing orders that would not be obeyed there has been a desire on the part of many Egyptian officers to volunteer in her defense and these officers have asked Lord Kitchener's permission to absent themselves from their posts for that purpose. Lord Kitchener's reply, quoted in the "Punch" Review, shows a certain satiric humor that must be classified among the finer weapons of diplomacy.

He says he would gladly give the desired permission, but he fears that the upward pressure in the junior ranks of the Egyptian army would compel him to place the absentees on the retired list, which would be a grievous return for patriotic valor. He advises them to curb their heroic ambitions, so natural to Egyptians, and stay at home.

To a number of nominal Bedouins, who made similar applications, Lord Kitchener expressed the surprise that they should wish to fight at all. Not having regarded them in the light of warriors, he had never included them in the Egyptian army, and an error that should be henceforth corrected in view of their martial inclinations. Thereupon the Bedouins decided that there was no place like home.

THOUGHT SHE DESERVED AID
Mother of Six Fine Babies Glad to Receive Advice of State Board.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, some time ago conceived the idea of sending to the mother of every baby reported at the end of every month some educational matter from the state board of health, together with a polite note wishing the mother and child well, and offering to help the mother in any way the board might do so to enable the baby to be brought up in the best possible manner. To one of the communications, Dr. Hurty a few days ago received the following letter:

"I would like to inquire as to the nature of the help you are prepared to give to the mother of six fine, healthy youngsters. I, doubtless shall wish advice, as sixty dollars a month doesn't admit of extensive fees to a physician, and I feel that as a woman who has had the state board of health give my offspring the mental, physical and moral status which is theirs I should have all the aid possible."

There is not an old soldier, no matter how brave he has fought, but deserving as a faithful wife and mother. I thank you very much for your kind offer.—Indianapolis News.

Dragon Not China's Emblem.
As shown in its prompt repudiation by the republic of China, the dragon was not the emblem of the late imperial family of Manchuria. This Oriental dragon is one of the powers of the air, and without wings; one of the forces of nature which the Taoists have not defied. The dragon kings dwell partly in water and partly on land; their shrines are for that reason erected on river banks. The germ of the dragon was in the primitive races inhering to some persistent memory of the greater lizards, such as the crocodile of the warmer waters. The Chinese dragon being without wings is accordingly closer to type than the winged dragon of the mythology of our more remote and northern race. As late as the "Historia animalium" of Conrad Gesner (1565) Gesner believed that one had but to travel far enough to the more remote defiles of the Alps, and he would surely encounter dragons.

Miles, Long and Short.
Considering the size of Switzerland one might expect a mile to be about as far as one could throw a ball, but the hardy mountaineers think 9,153 yards the proper thing, even when, as it generally is, it is very much uphill. The Swiss is the longest mile of all, being followed by the Vienna post mile of 8,296 yards.

The Flemish mile is 6,869 yards, the Prussian 8,227 yards, and in Denmark they were used to call it a mile, but the Arabs generally ride good horses and call 2,143 yards a mile, while the Turks are satisfied with 1,826 yards, and the Italians shorten the distance of a mile to 1,766 yards, just six yards more than the American has in mind when the agent waves his hand and blandly remarks, "About a mile."

Gathered in Twelve-Pound Trout.
What is said to be the largest trout caught in Montana was recently received from J. W. Scott, proprietor of the hotel at Armistead. It weighed 13 pounds, 8 ounces. From tip of tail to mouth it measured nearly three feet in length, a yardstick extending an inch at each end when laid beside the catch. It was 16 inches around the fish, measuring over the back fins.

The fish was dressed and when reweighed in Butte tipped the scales at 12 pounds.—Anaconda Standard.

The Cameo Rings

Muriel sat in the twilight, with a small box in her hand, unmindful of the shadows which were beginning to steal into the room. If one could have peeped inside the box one would have seen a cameo ring of a peculiar style. She was thinking of the one who had given it to her eleven years ago.

Just then a light tap at her door aroused her from her reverie, and she sprang to her feet. The box fell from her hand and rolled under the table.

"Oh, it's you, Miss Fuller!" she exclaimed, opening the door.

"Yes, it's I," laughed a young voice, and a girl of about 20 came into the room. "And why are you sitting in the dark?"

"I didn't realize it was so late," explained Muriel, as she turned on the light. She stooped to pick up the box, but it had opened and the ring had fallen out.

"That's a peculiar ring," she said, "and a beautiful one."

Muriel's face crimsoned. "Yes, it has a strange setting," she replied. "I've had it some time. A very dear friend gave it to me."

"Would you mind telling me about it?" said the girl, softly, and she slipped her arms about the other's neck.

Lois Fuller was a niece of Muriel's landlady, and during the last year had frequently visited her aunt. Muriel had seen quite a lot of the girl, for nearly every evening during her stay she had come up to Muriel's room.

Lois was expected, and at last the other broke the silence. "I've never seen any before," she said, "but perhaps it may do me good to confide in you. I was very young when I first met Philip Browning."

Here Lois gave a little start, but Muriel did not notice it. "He was an artist and came to our village the summer I was 17. He was a constant visitor at our home during his stay in town, and as he was far superior to any young man I had ever seen, it was not long before I grew to admire him."

"Before he returned to the city in the autumn he told me that he loved me. There was no happier girl in the world than I when he put this ring on my finger. He said that it was an heirloom and showed me another ring which was exactly like it, only a little smaller."

"This he wore on his watch chain. His parents had died when he was a child, and the rings had been left for him. This was his mother's betrothal ring, and his father used to wear the other ring, as he himself was doing, on his watch chain."

"The days after this were very bright until Philip was obliged to return home. At first I was lonely, but I tried to comfort myself with the thought that we would not be separated very long, for the following June we were to be married. I grew quite happy again as I made my plans for our new home, but in a few weeks my happiness turned into sorrow. My father was suddenly taken ill with pneumonia and in less than a fortnight I was left alone. This was a severe blow to me, for I loved my father very dearly. Now I only had Philip left."

"Up to that time he had written me long, loving letters, and it was a cruel shock to me the month following my father's death to pick up a paper and read of his marriage."

When Muriel had finished, Lois was looking very thoughtful. "Are you sure that there wasn't some mistake?" she said.

"Oh, no," answered Muriel, "there wasn't any mistake. I only hope he is happy—without doubt he is, and he probably never gives a thought to the girl he used to know so long ago."

Lois murmured a few words of sympathy and then, after a little while, she left Muriel alone.

One evening, about two weeks afterward, a feeling which Muriel could not define compelled her to again look at the cameo ring. After a little while she slipped it on her finger. At this juncture Lois came up to her room, her eyes sparkling and her cheeks flushed with excitement.

"Auntie has gone out," she said, "and I have a caller downstairs—a cousin of mine. I want you to meet him. You'll come down, won't you?"

As they entered the living room, made bright and cozy by a glowing open fire, Muriel started as a tall, familiar figure stepped toward them.

Philip Browning! Could it be possible? Yes, it was he and no other who took her trembling hands in his.

It took her only a few minutes to find out that there had been a mistake after all. It was Philip's brother who had married, and it was through an error of the paper that Philip's name was used.

He told her how pained he was when he recalled the better unopened, and how he had written after that, several times, only to have every letter returned to him in the same way. At last he had been forced to believe that she cared for him no longer. It was then that he had gone abroad, and he had returned home only two months ago.

"I owe my good fortune in finding you," he said, "to the fact that I am around gratefully, but his cousin had slipped from the room."

Among the Browning's possessions there is nothing they prize more than the cameo rings.

DECIDE YOURSELF

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed by Richmond Testimony.

Don't take our word for it. Don't depend on a stranger's statement. Read Richmond's endorsement. Read the statements of Richmond citizens.

And decide for yourself.

Here is one case of it. Mrs. S. S. Smith, 133 N. Estill Ave., Richmond, Ky., says: "I had rheumatic pains and had a great deal of trouble from irregularity of my kidneys. I was nervous and dizzy, and was subject to headaches. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a box at Middleton's Drug store as I had heard what they had done for others who had used them. Their use made me feel better in a short time. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly."
